HEDONISM

by Harley

I was talking to God the other day.

"You look down," he said. "Can I help?"

"It's my anatomy test," I said. "I made eight mistakes. Not to mention drawing the deep palmar arch in front of the thumb instead of behind it."

"Ah yes," said God. "trivia. But don't feel bad." He laughed. "Do you know that for hundreds of years the dolphins made their children learn the name of every type of fish in the sea? But they outgrew it in time, and so will you people. Be patient. We can't all be the most advanced species on our planet."

"Huh?"

"Never mind...it's the old story of the forest and the trees. You study the trees long enough, you're sure to miss the forest."

"That's easy for you to say. You probably already know how to recognize all the types of white blood cells."

"Relax," said God, "and think about this. Every living thing on your planet is made up of cells. Now, none of those cells know anything about the total organism they're living in. Did you ever think that all the plants and animals and human beings may make up one large organism, of which you're completely unaware? And that there may be hundreds of billions of these organisms in the universe? And maybe that they all form an even larger creation that even they can't conceive of? And you complain! Do you have any idea how much anatomy those guys have to learn?"

"Anyway," he continued, "don't worry about your test. We all make mistakes...me too. Lawyers now, that was a terrible mistake. And I shouldn't have put Hawaii so far away."

I got up to leave. I felt much better.

"By the way," said God, "the deep palmar arch... it was my mistake. It was really supposed to go in front of the thumb."

I smiled. "No kidding?"

"So help me, me."

Curriculum Committee Comments

Dr. Weizel (TWH) stated there continues to be a need for more detailed statements of goals and direction to teachers in some areas, eg Surgery Clinics in Third Year and Clinical Methods in Second Year.

Dr. McLean (SB) offered a recommendation for some alternative to Friday afternoon clinics for the Committee's consideration.

Dr. Shumak(TGH) recommended examination of the effectiveness of the Third Year Study Week-whether it should be retained, or whether the time would be better utilized if scheduled for Comprehensive Clinics, for example.

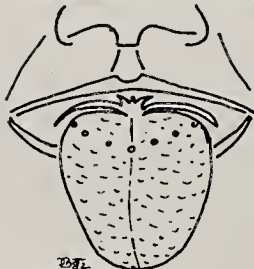

A proposal for Geriatrics, consisting of 37 hours of formal specific topic teaching in years 1-3, and two weeks of experience in a geriatric care setting, taken from the 8 week medicine rotation, in year 4, was brought forward.

The seasons are underway, and I offer a few brief notes.

The Blades of 8T2 lost last week, but hopes are still high. If not them, then let it be one of the other dozen Med teams. No where else has participation been so high.

Coach Stanners, after this week's defeat of the Girls' A basketball team, had this to say: "We have a lot of individual talent that still has to be developed into a good team effort. They play well together, and things should look up from now on."

Another one bites the dust! The Meds B (8T3) Soccer Team is back fresh from a summer of kicking sides of beef in Dominion's Freezer and on their way to a rarity-- a playoff spot! Led by Rick (the franchise) Hutfluss, they're off to a 4-0-1 record.

Sez Dave, "It's gotta be the 3-3-4." Sez Dornie, "Lak 'ell it is! It's just that guys can kick the bloody bohl this yea'."

THEY NEED YOUR SUPPORT! So come and find out- Will Erez win the Lady Byng? Will Dante's left cremaster muscle never heal? Will Mike K.'s face stop another one from going in?

The Lone Spectator

The 8T4 Muff Divers continued in their winning ways in the intramural touch football league. The Law D Team, hearing about the Diver's awesome reputation, failed to show. But all was not lost, for an 8T3 Meds Team led by Richard Korentager and Steve Kesten challenged the Divers. The Muff Divers shivered in fear, for had it not been said at the Hart House Farm that 2nd year always beats 1st year? Regaining their composure the Divers scored everytime they had the ball, defeating the 8T3 team by a score of 18-6. The 8T3 team had been mauled! Outstanding defensive plays by Bob Maunder and Ron Goldenberg led the Divers.
